The New Price Sets It Apart From Competition

The Cleveland holds a distinctive place among light cars, by the constant, better service it renders to its owners.

On city boulevards, or country roads, the Cleveland performs as few cars perform. Its highly refined overhead valve motor, found under the hood of no other car, is alive with power that smiles at long hills and welcomes a request for speed. Power, too, that throttles down to a creeping pace in crowded traffic and answers to the first touch of the throttle to "get away."

We would be glad to have you compare it with any car for ease of handling, comfort in riding on smooth roads and rough roads, and genuine excellence in its construction throughout.

Shocking Sentiment
The white gull seeks the open sea;
The partridge loves the woodland dim;
The robin in his ecstasy
Sings for his song the elm tree's limb;
The hawk patrols the sapphire sky;
The blackbird in the sedge hides;
The catbird hunts the bush nearby
Where in that nest her fledgling hides.

The locust, all the summer day,
Sings loudest in the blazing sun;
The hawkmoth roams the twilight gray
And sips the roses one by one;
The clover fields the morning bee
Its sweetness of the summer hour;
The butterfly persistently
Invades the heart of every flower.
The wind pursues the drifting cloud;
The lightning strikes the lake with fire;
The waterfall, with clamor loud
Forever seeks its heart's desire;
The wild deer ranges the upland lea
The swallow wings across the blue;
And just as far as I can see,
There's no objection if they do.

COLLEGE GRADUATES FAIL TO BOOST CENSUS

Marry Late in Life and Become
Parents of Comparatively
Few Children

Boston, Aug. 22.—Is race suicide increasing among college graduates? Maurice Ricker of the United States Public Health Service says that it is, and quotes statistics. Some college presidents are inclined to doubt the conclusions drawn by the health Service official and think his figures give a wrong impression. Others say that from lack of statistics of their own, they are not prepared to discuss the subject. They admit that Mr. Ricker's figures are startling and that they present a disquieting view of the future.

Addressing the recent convention of the National Educational Association in Des Moines, Ia., Mr. Ricker was quoted as follows: "Investigation by the federal public health service over a period of years indicates that the progeny of one thousand graduates from such institutions as Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Vassar and Smith will not exceed 500 in 100 years from now." He proceeded to compare the results of a similar canvass among illiterate foreigners and said it indicated that in a like period the original thousand would be multiplied at least a hundred times.

Frederick L. Allen, secretary of the Harvard University Corporation produced some figures of his own from the Harvard records. He said:

"Mr. Ricker's assertion would seem at first reading to give the impression that college students have on the average less than one child apiece. This is not so among Harvard graduates at any rate. Among the classes the 1881-20 at Harvard, the last ten classes whose statistics are available and may be considered fairly complete, the average number of men per class was 28, of whom 138 married and had 512 children, an average of 2.96 children per married graduate, or 1.55 children per capita for the whole class. The Yale figures for the same period are similar. The birthrate among Harvard graduates declined during the past half century. The decline, however, was less sharp in the class between 1870 and 1880 than it had been previously and a situation which is disquieting at best seems to be showing a gradual tendency to rectify itself."

No figures on the subject are available from Wellesley College but President Ellen S. Pendleton gives it as her impression that as far as the alumnae of Wellesley are concerned the number of marriages and the number of children per marriage have increased rather than decreased as the years have gone by. "Some twenty or more years ago," said Miss Pendleton, "The Association of Collegiate Alumnae gathered quite elaborate statistics comparing the number of marriages and number of children per marriage of college women with similar statistics of their sisters who did not go to college in their country nearest their own. These statistics showed that there was very slight difference between the two classes, but such difference as there was, was in favor of the College bred women, and as I have said while we have no recent figures my impression is that there are more marriages and more children per marriage in these later years."

"No one denies that college women marry later in life than non-college women and consequently any statistics that are made up on the basis of women not more than five years out of college would give an entirely wrong impression. I suspect that the same thing would be true of college men."

An article for the Smith Alumnae Quarterly and based on The Quintennial Catalogue of 1915 is offered as the latest available information regarding the graduates of Smith College and their children. This gave the average number of children for each of the total number of alumnae (5962) with the class of 1915 omitted as 56. The average of children for each marriage in the classes numbered 79 to 85 was 2.15. This decreased with later classes until the average for each marriage from 1879 up to 1915 was only 1.34. The compiler, Florence Honor Snow, of the class of 1904, suggests that if the figures seem small, arguments for the defence include the facts that the youngest classes are the largest, and that many college women marry late so that the figures regarding them are not available until they have been many years out of college.

Duennas' Duties.
The chief lady-in-waiting on the queen of Spain is known as a duenna. In a more general sense Spanish and Portuguese families apply the term to the elderly woman who takes charge of the younger members of a family—a kind of governess or companion.
